

Review of: "Supervisory Relationships, Constructing Academic Identity, and Transition to the Researcher: An Interpretative Single-Case Study"

Émilie Tremblay-Wragg¹

¹ Université du Québec à Montréal

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This text is highly relevant and presents results that lead us to reflect on the importance of a positive relationship between a mentor and a supervisee in doctoral studies. This unique case study shows that doctoral studies don't have to be painful, and that the role of the supervisor is very important in developing the skills of the future researcher. I particularly appreciated the organization of ideas in the results section and the extracts provided to support the author's points.