There are notable issues that need to be addressed for a more rigorous and credible analysis;

1. One critical limitation of the study is the absence of a direct comparison between ELB figures in 2013 and 2017.
2. This paper asserts an "upward trajectory " in life expectancies for both male and female during this period. However, without a thorough comparative analysis it is premature to attribute such changes.
3. The paper makes statements about the positive trends in ELB but lacks statistical analysis to validate these assertions

Only a single Table is provided. However, the finding are not according to the given Table.

Overall the study requires more results for further refinement to enhance its scientific rigor and clarity.
