It is not necessary to repeat the article title in the abstract. The problem is identified and described clearly in the abstract, but the solution is not mentioned, explain on the technical components to help readers understand the underlying concept. It might be helpful to include a brief mention of the expected outcomes in the abstract, this could include improved efficiency, faster response times, or better data management.

The article presented is in the style of a final year project thesis. Authors could structure it properly using common scientific article format such as the IMRAD format (Introduction–Method–Results–and–Discussion).

While the described methods outline the development and implementation of the online system, there is a lack of presentation regarding the outcomes of utilizing this system. The article does not provide a synthesis of the results obtained from the implemented online system.
