

Review of: "How Competent are Health Professionals in Delivering Nutrition Education? A Cross-Sectional Study in Ebonyi State, Nigeria"

Upasna Seth¹

¹ University of Delhi

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The researcher has chosen a very important topic, the manuscript is well written, however following points must taken care

1. There is discrepancy in data reported in Table 1 and text of the script.
2. Table 3 data is confusing and is not in parity with the table in result section.
3. The number of Nutritionists or Dietician included in the study is very low as compare to nurses and other medical professionals.
4. The introduction is not systematic and vague, it is highlighting the role of nutrition education instead of need of imparting nutrition education in proper manner to the patients.
5. The study does not assess how nutrition knowledge is imparted.
6. The mode of measurement of competence of health care giver need to be added.
7. The author need to relate the results with the review of literature in more systematic manner and with more current studies.