This qualifies more as a communication/experience than an original research article.

The introduction has too much information which needs to be minimized and structured such that it communicates the main objective of the article, including the nature (original research/experience, etc).

In the discussion, it has been concluded that the implementation of the unit has been 'successful', whereas it has not been explained as to what constitutes 'success'. Needs to be defined by, e.g., adherence to guidelines, improvements in survival outcomes, patient-related outcomes, etc.
