Dear authors;

The text addresses the need for further research on the impact of the Green Legacy on sustainable development and climate change in Ethiopia. The intention is to address the existing research gap. The abstract is quite lengthy and needs to be more concise. The introduction provides informative insights into the proposed topic but lacks substantiation from relevant literature. Several pieces of information need verification, and a comprehensive review is essential to address these gaps. This review should encompass not only indexed platforms such as WoS but also national platforms for managing scientific production, to locally map what truly exists. It would be interesting to include other global initiatives in the introduction. Why focus on the Netherlands? They have very few forests. They may invest in global plans, but where? For instance, Brazil and other neotropical countries. This addition would help counterbalance Eurocentrism. Turning to the quantitative analysis, its importance is as significant as the qualitative analysis, yet it remains underexplored. The qualitative aspect requires more detailed results, possibly through the addition of an appendix or supplementary material, to provide a robust and clear interpretation to the reader. The conclusions need enhancement; although they address the manuscript's theme, they fail to effectively conclude the research findings. How significant were the results? Did they address the objective? What about the research gaps? The Acknowledgments section should be condensed for better reader engagement. An English text revision is highly recommended.
