The article is very interesting, and it's important to have an up-to-date review. In my opinion, which I'll describe below, the article needs some adjustments, as several colleagues have already commented. I therefore make the following recommendations:

- 1 - The bibliography needs to be updated, with citations preferably from the last 5 years (until now);
- 2 - Despite being a review article on the subject, the authors have not made it clear what the aim of the text is. Even in the abstract, which needs to be clear to the reader.
- 3 - In vitro diagnostic tests could be better explained and updated.

In this way, I think the text will be more complete, and I agree with the observations made by the other reviewers.
