I appreciate the considerable improvements of the latest draft. What I still find quite challenging is the presentation of the conceptual model (based on the literature) before the presentation and discussion of the findings. I'd also spend more words in the description of the method adopted to review the literature, including the selection of the papers as well their analysis. The formulation of a research question would also be a good idea to guide the readers through the various sections of the paper and have a clear focus in the discussion and conclusion. I struggle to see any theoretical or methodological novelty and contribution to the literature, but I recognize and appreciate the empirical insights in an underinvestigated context. At present, this paper resembles more a very good report than a scientific article. Thanks for giving me the opportunity to read this work and good luck!
