I appreciate the intention to contribute to the disaster studies; however, the methodology is missing a lot of details, and the discussion should go more in-depth as it seems very light. The topic is not new, and many studies have been conducted on that topic, so I don't know why there are only 32 papers cited in the references.

Check the following papers; you might find them helpful to extend the discussion part of your paper.

For the methodology, let me see the reliability and validity tools/checks you used.

Great effort overall,
