The abstract does not meet some basic conditions. An abstract is a self-contained summary of a larger work. This helps readers and other researchers find what they're looking for and understand the magnitude of what's discussed. An abstract can determine whether or not someone becomes interested in your work. The purpose of an abstract is to summarize the contents of the paper, with all the key points, but none of the details. Producing an abstract is an essential part of this process, and it requires careful planning if it is to fulfil its purpose correctly.

The INTRODUCTION section provides the necessary background information.

The METHODOLOGY / MATERIALS & METHODS section is relatively well described and includes detailed information. The body of the paper describes the important RESULTS of the research, followed by several DISCUSSIONS.

The CONCLUSION section succinctly summarizes the major points of the paper and is quite succinctly presented. Only technical comments, very briefly presented, without other opinions, conclusions, or remarks, are included. I would recommend presenting the novelties of this study, the main characteristics, and the major conclusions that individualize this research.

FIGURES are particularly important because they provide the most objective support of the research. Your figures therefore need to be well-prepared, easy to read, and informative. The FIGURES' qualities are very low. These FIGURES must be improved. Please increase the quality of your figures.
