

Review of: "The Disruption of the COVID-19 Pandemic on Farm Produce and its Implications for the Future of Food Security - A review"

Andra-Ramona Porutiu¹

¹ University of Agriculture and Veterinary Medicine Cluj-Napoca

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Congratulations to the authors for this interesting study which brings a great contribution regarding the overall multiple social and economic aspects that derive from this pandemic phenomenon in some countries.

This study presents an appropriate introduction regarding the researched theme and also an extensive literature review on previous research. Within this research the authors include all key points and arguments in the introduction section, so the reader is going to have a good sense of the author's main ideas. The objectives of the study are very clearly stated and also correlated with the obtained results. The materials and methods used are valid regarding the analyzed subject and correctly applied. Data interpretation is conducted thoroughly, so specific and concrete results are obtained. There are no inconsistencies or contradictions in the article. The authors have used sufficient arguments and information to support their ideas. The overall research is well structured, conclusions are formulated in a matter that is easily accessible to all readers.