

Review of: "Perceptions of Academic Dishonesty: Insights from the University of Tehran"

Laila El Baradei¹

¹ American University in Cairo

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study tackles a very important topic: that of the perception of academic dishonesty amongst students. The authors clarify the importance of the topic, especially for a country like Iran. The statistical analysis is thorough, and the paper is well structured. For further improvement:

- The language needs to be revised. For example, the first sentence is incomplete.
- In the literature review, the authors need to expand the review to cover internationally published literature and not just focus on a number of articles published in Persian.
- The authors need to give a clear justification for their chosen study sample. All the best.