The subject of the manuscript is very interesting and novel. However, the authors could consider the suggestions below in order to improve the overall quality of the manuscript.

The aim of the study could be included at the end of the introduction, as well as the research question.

The theoretical framework could be detailed and related to the study proposed by the authors.

The authors should be more specific with the design of the study and it would be convenient to indicate whether they have followed the STROBE recommendations for the development of the study.

Specify the inclusion and exclusion criteria.

Indicate the Cronbach's alpha of the questionnaires and how the scores were calculated.

How the data were collected, how the sample was accessed and the date on which it was collected.

Indicate the statistical program used for data analysis.

The results could be expanded and correlations between variables could be made in more detail.

In the discussion, the limitations of the study could be included at the end of the discussion.

Implications for practice could be included in a separate section.

Conclusions should be clear and concise, responding to the objective of the study.
