

Review of: "Public Speaking Training Plan for Mitigating Oral Communication Apprehension"

Suneeta De¹

¹ Dr. B.C. Roy Engineering College

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Article reads better for the authors' revisitation.

Could be broader in terms of references which are predominantly focused on Kolb's research at present. L1 intervention, Multilingualism in class, and Immersion being important aspects of public speaking training pedagogy in adult learners. Personal experience in College and University teaching in India vouch for the efficacy of these processes.

The authors have a good prescription to address the public speaking challenges that they have undoubtedly encountered in their careers. It could merely be more holistic with other views.