

Open Peer Review on Qeios

Autosomal dominant cutis laxa

INSERM

Source

INSERM. (1999). Orphanet: an online rare disease and orphan drug data base. Autosomal dominant cutis laxa. ORPHA:90348

Autosomal dominant cutis laxa (ADCL) is a connective tissue disorder characterized by wrinkled, redundant and sagging inelastic skin associated in some cases with internal organ involvement.