

Review of: "Implementation of e-learning during COVID-19"

Michael Miller¹

¹ University of Arkansas - Fayetteville

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This was a good, basic, straightforward introduction to the issues surrounding the transition to online teaching and learning. There were several areas that the article could be strengthened with: defining online and e-learning, especially in terms of the types of LMS systems that were used and a more clear and expanded description of the research methods, including the sampling framework and data collection process.