I appreciate your research paper and the importance of the research topic, especially in densely populated areas. I have some observations, which are:

1) Abstract

The wording of the abstract is very general and needs clarification of the research methodology, the study sample, and part of the important results and conclusions to be clear to the reader.

2) Literature review

The literature review needs a conclusion that collects what has been reached, preferably in the form of a table and how it was used in the practical part of the research.

3) Research methodology

The research methodology and method of measurement are unclear and incomprehensible

The method of collecting information is ambiguous. For example, how was the time of use determined? Was it by monitoring for a period of time, a week or a month, and then calculating the average time of use?

The research must be clear and accurate. In the process of gathering information and away from description and self-analysis

4) Results and conclusion

needs detail and separation between them.
