

Review of: "The Disruption of the COVID-19 Pandemic on Farm Produce and its Implications for the Future of Food Security - A review"

Tlou Raphela

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study is interesting as a systematic Review, however, there are a lot of problems in this study, Some of which I have indicated in the article.

Introduction

1. There is a clearly defined introduction, conclusions and references however other traditional sections like the methods and results are not clearly defined
2. There are no boundaries, irrelevant information is included in some sections I am assuming is still the introduction
- 3.

Editorials

1. There are a lot of inconsistencies across the study e.g How Covid-19 is written across the study
2. Referencing is a big issue
3. Fragment statements
4. Lots of sentences need to be rephrased
5. Language editing is recommended

Methodological issues

1. The study is not reproducible
2. How was the systematic review conducted, which scholarly databases were reviewed, Scopus, web of science, etc
3. Methodology on how the data was collected and analyzed to get the interesting results is not clear
4. How was the data analysed, which software was used if any?