

Review of: "Biological Components in Cucumbers (Cucumis Sativus L.): Implications for Pickle Manufacturing and Health Benefits in Fresh and Processed Varieties"

Nezahat Turfan¹

¹ Kastamonu University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Dear Editor,

I reviewed the article on the bioactive components found in cucumbers and their effects on human health, as well as the changes in components in processed cucumbers.

Actually, although it is not my exact field, I accepted it because it was among the subjects I was working on.

The study touched upon a good subject, and the information was given well.

However, no references are given while the processes are explained.

I think it would be more appropriate if it were stated where the information was obtained or if it was associated with certain literature.

The title can be accepted if the arrangements I have described are made.