

Review of: "Skilling Up for Tomorrow's Cities: The Workforce of Smart Cities"

Vesna Bogojević Arsić¹

¹ University of Belgrade

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

In my opinion, the paper has the potential to become a very good one. Related to this, I would suggest an introduction improvement because this part has to present the paper as a whole, especially the methodological part and analysis of the data.

The literature review could be better and should reflect the multidisciplinary of the chosen topic.

The methodological part has to be presented and written in a way that clearly defines, not only the data used, but also the methodology through a brief presentation along with providing the reasons for doing this. The authors mentioned some projects they were engaged in, but they have to be more specific. In addition, the adequate analysis of the results would significantly enhance the paper quality. Finally, the conclusion needs to be written because the final part of the paper is too general and does not contain some key elements.