

Review of: "Improving agriculture and food security in Africa: Can the one health approach be the answer?"

Yadeta Bedasa

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study investigates the role, significance, and connection of one health approach to alleviating Africa's food insecurity crisis. The current state of African agricultural production and food insecurity was well explained using empirical evidence. Furthermore, the study demonstrated how a healthy approach improves agriculture and food security in Africa. This study's findings could be useful to stakeholders, governments, and non-governmental organizations. The authors explain clearly why they chose to write a comprehensive review in this field. The review article provides an excellent overview of the field's transformation as well as assumptions for its future development. This publication, I believe, will be very useful to both the academic community and the general public.