

Review of: "Soccer fans, stadium attendance, and interpersonal trust in the Mexican population"

Sacit Hadi Akdede

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Referee report

Report for the paper entitled as "Soccer fans, stadium attendance, and interpersonal trust in the Mexican population."

The topic is really interesting and I was so eager to see the results.

Personally, I was expecting to see a significant relationship whether positive or negative when I first the title.

The author is aware of the main limitation of the paper: small sample size for statistical analysis. This is the main deficiency of the paper.

My suggestion is that collecting a little more data points would improve the paper and make valuable contribution. I believe a little bit more data points can be collected in a couple of months (approximately 385 data points would be representative) Afterwards

Compare soccer fans' interpersonal trust with other fans of the same team.

Compare soccer fans' interpersonal trust with other people in general.

Compare no soccer fans' interpersonal trust with members of same organization.

Compare no soccer fans' interpersonal trust with other people in general.