Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article addresses important and highly relevant topics. However, there are some improvements that should be made, listed as follows.

Abstract: The author has provided a good background on the climate and agriculture-related issues but does not specifically describe what the article is about, the methods used, and the results obtained. It is recommended to include these aspects in the abstract. Part of paragraph 1.1 could be included directly in the abstract.

Paragraph 1.3: The author should provide the bibliography related to the sources used for the data (links to download the data used and articles from other authors who have already used IMPACT). It could incorporate in this paragraph what is mentioned at the beginning of paragraph 2.2.1.

Paragraph 2.2: Since Figure 1 is mentioned in the article before Table 1, Figure 1 should precede Table 1. Also, in the tables, captions should appear above the respective tables and not below them. It is recommended to improve the quality of images and tables.

Paragraph numbering: It is suggested to standardize the numbering of paragraphs, numbering all introductory paragraphs, those of the methods used, and those of the results in the same way.

In general, the article is a paper review. The author presents data and graphs taken from other works, making it a paper review. This aspect should be specified in the abstract and possibly in the title of the article.
