Thank you very much for sending your manuscript in which you reflect on some recommendations that must be taken into account in future health crises.

It would be important for the publication to specify that it is an opinion article.

On the other hand, in the discussion, you mention: "Genetic variations in sub-Saharan Africa may confer resistance to COVID-19, suggesting the importance of understanding regional genetic factors in pandemic management." For that, it would be good if in the introduction you could mention the variations that have been found according to continent or race.

It would also be very useful if the title of the last section indicated: "Conclusions and recommendations," if the format allows it.
