

Review of: ""There Are Challenging Cases for Us": A Qualitative Study of Cypriot Midwives' Experiences Investigating Incidents of Intimate Partner Violence During Pregnancy"

Lorenzo Franceschetti

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study is very interesting and well done, on an important topic. All phases of the study are explained in detail, and the conclusions it reaches are well supported.

The only suggestion to the authors is to better outline in the introduction the phenomenon of intimate partner violence during pregnancy, explaining the various forms of violence and highlighting the negative consequences for the woman and the fetus.

In the paragraph Demographics, the M:F ratio should also be reported. In the table below, it might be useful to include a row with the average of ages and years of experience (with standard deviation) at the bottom.