This paper addresses a critical topic requiring much-needed attention from policymakers, development experts, and private sector actors. The information provided gives a rich picture of the situation of women-led agribusinesses in Uganda. However, the research may need strengthening to include a clear methodology. The author may also need to carry out a thorough literature review on similar cases, best practices, and lessons from other countries like Kenya and Rwanda, or sectors such as health. The author should also show how the study contributes to knowledge in the industry.
