The research topic is original, current and relevant because it can bring important contributions, but some elements need to be made more explicit and detailed.

In the abstract I would recommend underlining the originality and added value of the paper, the limits of the research and the practical and theoretical contributions.

The introduction lacks reference to the research question, the research method, the added value, the results and the contribution of the paper.

It would be advisable to insert a paragraph describing in detail the theoretical reference framework and the research method used. It would be appropriate to explain in detail the method used to make the research repeatable. The references of other scholars who have used the same method to give value to the method used are missing.

In the discussions, the connections with the literature that would help define the added value of the paper are missing.

In the conclusions there is no description of the added value of the research, the limitations and the description of future research.
