

Review of: "Influence of Institutional Factors on Job Satisfaction among Nurses at a Regional Hospital, Ghana"

Agnieszka Kister¹

¹ Maria Curie-Skłodowska University (MCSU)

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article is interesting, concerned with nurses' job satisfaction. The research problem focuses on evaluating the quality of health care. This is a current problem considered in many countries. The OECD report indicates the need to evaluate health care from the point of view of quality indicators. Such indicators include job satisfaction of medical staff, including nurses. The article is correctly structured. The research methods used are well chosen, but not advanced. The conclusions are correct. The bibliography should include more recent items. The article has minor editorial errors.