

Review of: "The Role of Nation and State Institutions in Nigeria's Economy: An Empirical Review"

Daniel Francisco Nagao Menezes

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The text is current and interesting and highly relevant for two reasons:

- a) Starts the debate for the creation of an African institutional theory, with the construction of an African thought about institutions. This is necessary and urgent. The same should be repeated in other developing regions such as Southeast Asia and Latin America.
- b) Scientifically disseminates the Nigerian economy and institutions. Nigeria is one of the most important African countries and in the world. However, information about Nigeria is little publicized outside Africa.

The text also provides a future research roadmap for Nigerian institutional development, which is the culmination of the article.
