Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article on dimensions of Sociosexuality and their relationship with light and dark personality traits is a valuable addition to the literature. Analyses are straightforward and clearly presented. Theoretical framework is described adequately and assumptions are spelled out in line with the rationale. Few additions would enhance the interest and address limitations.

Sample

Female and male participants are very uneven. This should be addressed in discussion as casual sexual behaviour are differently related to either gender. Additional analyses for Gender differences in desire and behaviour may be interesting.

Discussion

Although discussion has explained the results conceptually and in view of previous studies, the literature lacks studies from Conservative, collectivist/ interdependent cultures.

Further prediction of behaviour from attitudes should be addressed and may be done controlling for Gender. Casual sexual relationships also are related to economic factors as commitment to long term or married partnership requires some affordability.

Addressing these aspects would make it more comprehensive.
