Manuscript title: Perspectives on the Immune System in Sepsis

Dear editor,

In this instructive review article, the authors have attempted to address the role of DNA and RNA and their expression in immune functions in sepsis. I believe it is valuable in terms of presenting current molecular biological perspectives. I think the abstract should be improved regarding what this article offers to readers and what the authors aimed to. Detailed information on miRNA functions in the immune system is important. Novel treatment targets are also presented. Authors should finalize the article with a paragraph of overall conclusions addressing future research.

Best regards
