The presented article brings very relevant and enlightening information about the role and importance of libraries as support to achieve the objectives of sustainable development.

Review articles on the subject are extremely relevant, since in many countries, it has not yet been very clear how libraries can contribute to and engage in sustainable development projects.

In Brazil, often the funding agencies open notices, and the lack of clarity from Brazilian funding agencies in identifying the importance of libraries for sustainable development actions makes many libraries not even consider sending proposals.

Excellent article!
