There should be an indication in the abstract of the data collection methods and the data analysis.

The population and sample should be fully specified. A larger population could have been used for the reliability of the research.

It is understood that a total of $n=220$ questionnaires were administered to students at CUT, and $n=185$ fully answered questionnaires were used for the analysis, ensuring a return rate of 84%. Especially, there is no information on what basis these 220 participated in the study.

The study's limitations and inclusion and exclusion criteria should have been written.
