

Review of: "Microinsurance: Bibliography of Unclassified Literature"

Antonio Orozco Ramos¹

¹ University of Kansas

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

To the author:

This topic interests me because much has been written about microcredit, but little about the other components of microfinance. Nonetheless, the following are my main comments to the article:

1. The article's title, substance, and conclusions are all disconnected.
2. The mentioned articles should be organized into topics and time periods.
3. Some articles' contents (background, numbers, etc.) are repeated.
4. There are several articles that appear to have no connection to microinsurance (i.e. 57) or microfinance (i.e. 120).
5. Are there any articles that address the systemic and systematic issues associated with microinsurance? For the most part, it appears that everything is peachy, although we all know that it is not the case when financial services are involved.
6. A more powerful, concentrated conclusion may have been reached. It appears to be a rehash of the introduction.

I hope you find these comments helpful.