Review of: "Shaping Tomorrow's Workforce: Adapting University Curriculum to Address China's College Graduate Employment Challenges"

Yenwan Chong[1]

1 Universiti Utara Malaysia

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

On the one hand, this is a noteworthy "opinion piece" on an important issue currently affecting the Chinese economy namely the high rate of unemployment among graduates following the Covid-19 pandemic. The author has put forward some good analysis on the problem and recommended some strategies to solve the crisis of high unemployment among graduates in China. On the other hand, this article does not conform to the structure required of a research paper. There is no review of literature nor discussion on the research method employed by the author that resulted in the findings and recommendations put forth in the paper. In addition, the paper is poorly referenced. References listed are unsuitable and inadequate. Suggest that the author review and build upon the numerous articles that have been published on the challenges of graduate unemployment in China and the steps taken to resolve this issue elsewhere in the world. The keywords for this article can also be improved.