

Review of: "Geopolitical constructs of international politics - their cultural & ideological roots"

Tea Perinčić

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This is a very brave intention to show a continuity or discontinuity in IR from ancient time (Amarna Letters, Egypt and Hittites and early Chinese diplomacy and defence system). The author's starting thesis is that Westphalian Peace in 1648 and the modern European society built up on this treaty model needs to be revise because of being too European centric and too narrow to understand today's global intentions and tensions as well as contextualising contemporaneous IR. In fact, author's unwritten thesis would be that human society needs a form of agreement and law upon which different social groups and societies can call for keeping peace and a kind of normal leaving without being constantly in conflict and war. The conclusion which could be derived is that general human society still did not reach point where we can have a global law system to guaranty essential human rights and prevent conflicts and wars. Unfortunately, the article is too short to give us more elaborated and scientifically proven content. From this are deriving many possible mistakes and misunderstandings.