

Review of: "Sentiment Analysis of Opinions about Online Education in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq during COVID-19"

Irfana Omer

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study is a serious attempt at the Analysis of Opinions about Online Education in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq during COVID-19. The introduction of the study is comprehensive and sufficient as per the need of the title of the research paper. The related literature review corroborates the study objectives. The findings of the study are well elaborated through tables; especially, the graphical representation of negative and positive classification of sentiments. However, what are those positive and negative sentiments is the missing element in the paper. The researchers should have provided a few examples as original quotes from the dataset for a better demonstration of the types of sentiments via Twitter. Moreover, a discussion on the reported sentiments is required to draw conclusions and make recommendations.

Overall, the study is really interesting and needs a little extended effort to have a better impact.