This is an interesting article that deals with the health effects of emigration on those left behind.

In China, we have a lot of researches on left-behind children, but very little researches on Non-migrating Spouses' Health.

The article is well organized and carefully written. I have one suggestion.

There are many other articles on the health effects of emigration on those who remain at home. The authors can present a theoretical model of the problem and the findings can be related to it.
