This article's writing has become better now, but it still needs improvements and responses to these questions:

1. The meaning of a "neutral" score on the questionnaire scale.
2. How the authors deal with the ethical procedures related to the application of questionnaires.
3. The limits of the research after the discussion, or insertion into the conclusions, according to my point of view, is a very relevant issue.
4. More information about the context where these balconies are inserted: for instance, sketches of the apartment layout would be very welcome, plus the sun orientation of the balconies. Also, the city climate in the city where these balconies are located.
5. 5. To make an additional review easier, it would be interesting to highlight the text and figures changes, for instance in red.
