Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Specify why a qualitative approach was chosen. Highlight the strengths of qualitative research in exploring the nuanced differences between traditional and innovative teaching methodologies. Provide a rationale for choosing a literature review over other research methods, such as empirical studies, surveys, or interviews. Explain how this approach is particularly suited to addressing the research questions or objectives. Discuss any steps taken to ensure the validity and reliability of the findings. For example, did the review incorporate multiple perspectives or cross-verify sources?

Whenever you mention findings from previous research, you should cite the original studies. All statistics and data points should be cited. Even when you paraphrase someone else's ideas, you should still provide a citation. Cite sources when discussing specific case studies or examples.
