

Review of: "Exploring the Link between Smartphone Use, Recorded Violence, and Social Sharing in 80 Case Studies in Italy"

Virginia Medina-ávila¹

¹ Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Abstract: The abstract still does not specify the methodology used for the research, nor does it clearly state the hypothesis. What are the believed reasons for the association between smartphone use and the prevalence of violent content? However, all this information is found throughout the text.

Introduction: The suggested changes have been made, making clear the distinctions between violence and aggression, which are fundamental to the analytical work carried out. It is also clear what the research objective is and the challenges faced to achieve it.

Methods: The methodology is clear and specific, using identifying words that are adequately categorized.

Results: The presentation of disaggregated information for analysis is consistent and has clear specifications.

Analysis Results: The writing is clear and presents the results shown in the abstract. It has the necessary characteristics to highlight the primary elements of the analysis.

Discussion: The discussion has been expanded, showing various aspects of the role of technologies, their uses, and mediations. Therefore, the article is solid and not polarizing. The changes made have positively favored the text.

Conclusions: The conclusions present relevant notes that can serve as references for similar research on this topic.

General Comments: The topic is significant, the examples are easy to visualize, and the graphics facilitate the containment of information that might otherwise be complex to categorize. The changes made to the article show the authors' commitment, as well as contribute to this field of knowledge.