Review of: "Potential Benefits of Information Technology Trends in Nigerian Tertiary Institutions"

Halliru Ahmad Muhammad

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The topic "Potential Benefits of Information Technology Trends in Nigerian Tertiary Institutions" is very interesting, as it's current, relevant, and timely. But if I may comment on how to improve, the following are my views:

In the introduction, the authors could refer to the lockdown due to COVID-19 because this imposed the exploitation of IT concepts in the domain of education. There should be argumentation on how the time frame 2015 – 2023 was selected. The authors write "--- approaches that are reshaping the industry" — which industry? There is a need for specification. The article is related to general information technology. The authors should have clarified what is meant by "tertiary institutions" — are they the only ones? And also, the authors should clarify why the article mentions Nigeria as a kind of case study, while the discussion of IoT, etc., and its impact on learning is an international and broader one.