

Review of: "Ecotheology: missiological perspective in awareness"

Hengki Wijaya

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This paper is interesting because of the idea of looking at environmental damage from a missiological perspective. Of course, there are new things to contribute to the continuity of the universe's future. However, the terms eco-theology and ecological theology need to be clearly defined. This paper requires development in the existing literature. Then the writer needs to reconstruct it so that this writing is built with a biblical missiological approach (what the Bible says is not human free thinking). Literature review becomes important from research and ideas from various countries. When I searched for these references in the last ten years, I found that many eco-theological studies have been discussed on the African continent. Therefore the writing team needs to be aware of this before examining it in depth in the context of Indonesia as a developing country towards a developed country.

Another section I highlight is that some of the references seem old and need to be added to new connections that are more up-to-date in viewing current ecology and predicting future ecology. Ecological theology is also inseparable from food theology and other theologies that revolve around other theological thoughts concerned with preserving nature, forests, and the survival of earth's creatures. Some reading sources that can be read are as follows.

Davis, A. (2021). Pentecostal Approaches to Ecotheology: Reviewing the Literature. Australasian Pentecostal Studies, 22(1), 4–33.

Dungy, T. (2010). The Mentor Leader: Secrets to Building People and Teams That Win Consistently (1st ed.). Carol Stream, Ill: Tyndale House Publishers. Retrieved from <http://gen.lib.rus.ec/book/index.php?md5=5ef6a5fc52ddcb5020b83bf8c67dc0e2>

Langmead, R. (2002). Ecomissiology. Missiology, 30(4), 505–518. <https://doi.org/10.1177/009182960203000405>

Ma, W., & Ma, J. C. (2020). Missiology: Evangelization, holistic ministry, and social justice. In The Routledge Handbook of Pentecostal Theology. Routledge.

Niemandt, C. J. P. (2015). Ecodomy in mission: The ecological crisis in the light of recent ecumenical statements: original research. Verbum et Ecclesia, 36(3), 1–8. <https://doi.org/10.4102/ve.v36i3.1437>

Pihkala, P. (2016). Rediscovery of Early Twentieth-Century Ecotheology. Open Theology, 2(1). <https://doi.org/10.1515/opth-2016-0023>

