This is an interesting article discussing the changes in crop diversification across land size categories over a period of 20 years. However, the writing of the article is not yet mature, and it is suggested that the authors further improve it. (1) The article applies existing techniques to calculate the diversification index in Murshidabad district but lacks innovation in methodology; (2) The analysis section of the article mainly interprets the changes in the diversity index, which is relatively simplistic; (3) Both the introduction and abstract sections lack necessary elements.
