Review of: "Agroecological Practices in Traditional Communities and Adjacent Areas of Agrarian Reform Settlements: Rio Una (Chapada Diamantina-Itaeté-Bahia, Northeastern Brazil)"

General comment: The work is adequate, dealing with a topic that is relevant both to the population of the region and to the development of agroecological practices in other areas, as well as being a portrait of these practices for the scientific community. However, some excerpts in all sections could and should be included to enrich the reader's experience and situate them, as well as being necessary for textual and contextual coherence and cohesion. For example, the methodology is confusing and missing some crucial information. I have sent the authors an in-depth version of the manuscript with lots of comments and corrections.

The English translation has several problems, many of which I have pointed out and corrected throughout the text. The images also need improvement, such as merging them into plates and improving the resolution.
