

Review of: "Factors Influencing the Laptop Buying Behavior of Students in Vietnam"

Surjandy .<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Binus University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. The appropriate sample size must be calculated according to the chosen theoretical framework. Can 215 respondents adequately reflect the population? If such is the case, which theory is employed?
2. Has the issue been identified on the laptop? Typically, research starts with the identification of an issue or a need for further development. The article does not identify the specific issues encountered by laptop users. Therefore, it need responses derived from thorough investigation.
3. This article still need further comprehensive observations. Conduct a comparative analysis of 20 publications pertaining to laptop purchases, and elucidate the identified discrepancies to highlight the originality of this research.