

Review of: "How many papers are published each week reporting on trials of interventions involving behavioural aspects of health?"

Zhang Jiale

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Thanks for inviting me. This is an interesting short article and it can provide some useful information for readers who are interested in this field. However, I think this topic has a lot of room for improvement. For example, the author can adopt bibliometric method to make a further research on this topic or specific behaviour. Citespace is a good software and easy to learn.

These questions may help you improve its quality.

- * What is the original contribution of the paper ?
- * How does it progress existing global knowledge?
- * Who should read this paper ?
- * How will they benefit from reading the paper ?
- * Who will use this paper in their research?
- * How can you justify your methodology?
- * Are the results clearly articulated and understandable by a non expert?
- * Why is this paper significant and to whom ?
- * What will be the impact of the paper to academic research and industry practice?
- * Why someone will recommend this paper to his students or colleagues?