

Review of: "Evolution and Challenges of DDR: A Policy Review Through the Prism of Colombia's Three-Generational Experience"

Vicente Sánchez¹

¹ Universidad Complutense de Madrid

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The research presented includes the necessary basic elements that allow the analysis of the subject in question. The clarity of exposition is notable, as well as the explanatory effort to attract the reader to a subject little known to society. The author states the objective of the research precisely. Likewise, the methodology used is appropriate for this type of preliminary investigation. It has a significant number of bibliographic resources that enrich the text and reinforce its argumentative structure. It may be interesting to conceive in the text a space to explain the territorial problem that former guerrillas face due to their isolation and lack of infrastructure, as well as to mention the geographical dimension of the area of influence of FARC-EP and the dependence it has on a poorly industrialized agricultural sector connected to the main distribution centers of the country. Future research can be enriched with concrete data on the economic growth of these areas, as well as with development data that will allow you to verify whether the economic and social reintegration objectives established in the commitments of the Peace Agreement are being met.