

Review of: "Knowledge among Health care workers (HCWs) regarding biomedical waste management (BMW) during COVID-19 Pandemic"

Ashish Trivedi

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This cross-sectional study accesses the knowledge of biomedical waste management among health care workers during COVID-19 pandemic is an important topic considering the high caseloads, staff rotations, newly hired healthcare workers and involvement of volunteers following staff shortages at the health care facilities during COVID-19 pandemic. Some suggestions for further improvement and inclusions are as under,

Use the full form of SKIMS, where first used in the abstract as well as in the manuscript. Brief details of the study location can be added in the introduction part. Also, can include the need to carry out this study during the COVID-19 pandemic with supporting literature.

The study location can be included in the methodology part and further details about the study tool, pre-existing (include reference/s) or self-developed with the details of pre-testing and/or validation if available. What statistical test was used?

A brief description highlighting the findings from the tables in the results part and a comparison of findings with other research during the COVID-19 pandemic (if available) can be included in the discussion part.

Qeios ID: TXC3EQ · https://doi.org/10.32388/TXC3EQ