The article treats an important problem in EFL: teaching English for specific purposes. The approach used includes an overview of literature and semi-structured interviews. The author reaches the conclusion that designing an ESP course is a complex process necessitating input from content specialists and not only language specialists.

To improve the article, the author should extend the section discussing the interviews or at least add an appendix with the questions asked to the interviewees. Also, it would be necessary to add a summary of the different answers provided by the interviewees.

Another small point: please spell out both abbreviations EFL and ESP in full, followed by abbreviations in brackets, either in the abstract or the first time the terms occur in the paper.
